

Filing claims for travel insurance

University Student	My classmates are planning a summer trip
	I heard that one of them plans to buy travel insurance and then file a claim after the trip for an already damaged camera Can he do that?
Smart tips for policy holders
Narrator	Of course not!
	Travel insurance provides coverage for insured persons and their personal belongings when they are travelling They need to produce relevant documents such as receipts or police reports to the insurance company to support their claims Using false documents to deceive an insurance company for claims is a criminal offence one may be sentenced to jail for committing fraud
	It doesn't pay to get small gains by fraudulent means
